

Writing for The SECA Reporter

The SECA Reporter is published quarterly (January, April, July and October) and contains a variety of articles that are of interest to early childhood professionals. These articles may:

- Provide information on current research and updated early childhood practice.
- Provide information about initiatives/programs that are located in the SECA region.
- Provide thoughts and ideas that are submitted by early childhood professionals.

The SECA Reporter is produced by Glenda Bean, Executive Director, and the selection of articles is based upon content and quality. If accepted, articles may be published immediately or held for future issues. If you're interested in submitting an article for consideration, please follow these guidelines.

Submission Guidelines

- All materials should be submitted electronically to gbean@southernearlychildhood.org.
- The article should be no more than 800 words in length and meet the following guidelines.
 - a. The topic is timely and of value to professionals who work with young children.
 - b. The article identifies resources that will assist the member in accessing additional information. These resources should include any previous information developed by SECA on the topic, including Dimensions of Early Childhood, Dimensions Extra, The SECA Reporter and the monthly e-mail resources.
 - c. Wording is concise and clear....copy is edited for correct grammar and punctuation.
 - d. The article is double-spaced and in WORD.
- A photo of the author and a brief bio/vita should accompany the article.
- High-resolution photographs and graphics that illustrate the article are accepted. The author/photographer will be credited with any photos that are utilized. Photo releases are required prior to publication of photos. You will find more information in the SECA Photo Guidelines.
- Articles are accepted at any time during the year. Refer to the SECA Reporter archives for examples of past issues of the publication.
